Philanthropy

The generosity of alumni, friends, companies, charitable trusts and current students and staff enhances the University's teaching and research year on year. The collective impact of donations made to Bristol cannot be underestimated. And behind the numbers each gift takes on a life of its own as it touches an individual student or academic, enabling them to do more, faster.

In 2009/10, Bristol's supporters donated in greater numbers and with ever-more generous gifts:

- Campaigns and Alumni Relations, working with academics and other colleagues, raised over £7.6 million.
- More than 6,700 individuals, companies and trusts from 49 countries made gifts.
- The number of Bristol Pioneers (donors giving £1,000 or more in an academic year) reached 291, with members contributing nearly £1.2 million.
- The Centenary Campaign, launched in celebration of the University's Centenary in 2009, has now raised over £54 million in cash and pledges towards its target of £100 million.

DAN FROWLEY

Bristol alumnus Tim Ritchie (BA 1978) and his wife Judi recently made a gift to stem-cell research that will ensure that PhD student Kyla Brady (pictured) is able to complete the final two years of her research. The long-term aim of Kyla's project is the development of new treatments for joint diseases affecting cartilage, such as osteoarthritis.

For Tim and Judi it was not just Kyla's career they wanted to secure; they were also interested in the human benefit of the research, as Tim explains: 'My wife and I have been making an annual donation for the past couple of years. Most recently, we spent a day at the University and were able to learn more about the pioneering work being undertaken by Professor Anthony Hollander (PhD 1990) and his team, and to hear about the difference this has already made to the quality of life of many people.'

'It was this visit which finally convinced us to give more this year. Learning first-hand of the personal commitment and dedication of those involved in groundbreaking research, and appreciating exactly what difference our own contribution would make to this, really brought the plan to life.'
